

COLONIAL READING

Reading was an important center for business, culture and military affairs during the 18th century. George Washington visited Reading several times in the 1790's. In 1793 he came to inspect the canal construction near Womelsdorf and in 1794 passed through on his way to western Pennsylvania. He stayed at Witman's Tavern on the Northwest corner of the Square on this second visit.